

09 October

Chief Executive Officer John Cryan is losing the support of some investors just seven months into Deutsche Bank AG's latest turnaround plan.

Days before Donald Trump decides whether to decertify Iran's compliance with the 2015 nuclear deal, the top voices in Washington seeking to minimize the damage from any such move are key U.S. allies.

Saudi Aramco plans to make "the deepest customer allocation cuts in its history" in oil supplies in November to help reduce global inventories and balance the market.

The Singaporean venture capital firm led by Finian Tan, who made his name investing early in Chinese search giant Baidu Inc., has completed its largest fundraising yet to bankroll global deals.

10 October

Catalan President Carles Puigdemont said that he'll seek talks with the government in Madrid over the future of his region in Spain, rowing back from an immediate declaration of independence that threatened to turn a constitutional crisis into an economic one.

Bank of England Governor Mark Carney is ready to raise interest rates from a position of economic weakness rather than strength.

Hawaii says President Donald Trump's latest attempt to restrict foreigners' travel to the U.S. is just the latest outgrowth of his stated aim to enact a total and complete shutdown of Muslims entering the country.

The scandal engulfing Kobe Steel Ltd. that's rocked industrial Japan deepened on Wednesday as the steelmaker said its falsification of product data extended beyond copper and aluminum with incorrect information found on iron powder.

11 October

Less than a decade after the last major banking crisis, Goldman Sachs Group Inc. and JPMorgan Chase & Co. are offering investors a new way to bet on the next one.

Bitcoin is so close to making a new record and it could be because it's taking market share from its smaller cousins.

U.S. central bankers are looking for clues that underlying strength in the economy will underwrite their plans to raise interest rates for a third time this year, a record of their meeting last month showed, as officials wrestled with why inflation remains so low.

Corporate scandals may be tainting Japan's once-revered business reputation, but at least one market isn't perturbed: equities.

12 October

Brexit talks are deadlocked with the U.K. side hoping European leaders will throw Prime Minister Theresa May a bone at a summit next week. It's likely to be disappointed.

Italian Prime Minister Paolo Gentiloni won a vote in parliament on reform of the electoral system, averting the risk of a government crisis and early elections.

The Trump administration withdrew the U.S. from the United Nations cultural organization, saying it's biased against Israel and citing its decision to admit the Palestinian territories as a member state.

Samsung Electronics Co. Vice Chairman and Chief Executive Officer Kwon Oh-hyun is stepping down after more than three decades at the company, saying that he's making way for new leadership amid a corruption trial surrounding the de facto chief.

13 October

London house prices are falling at their fastest pace since the aftermath of the financial crisis, confirming the British capital as the worst-performing part of a slowing market.

Don't celebrate too soon. That was the key message as policy makers and investors left Washington on Sunday after attending the annual meetings of the International Monetary Fund and World Bank.

As billionaire Arkady Rotenberg's builders race to finish a bridge to Crimea, Vladimir Putin already has a new mega-project lined up for his childhood friend.

Li Ka-Shing's CK Asset Holdings Ltd. sold its 75 percent holding in The Center to a Chinese-led group for HK$40.2 billion ($5.15 billion), a record for a Hong Kong office tower, the Hong Kong Economic Journal reported.

